

Lorinser Smart ForTwo with 101bhp!

If the economic situation has forced you to put that tuned Mercedes SL on hold, consider this... top German Mercedes tuning house Lorinser, now offer a package of tuning and styling upgrades based on the diminutive Smart ForTwo. It may not cut the mustard in the same way as a SL would but it still allows you to proudly display the Lorinser badge and it offers a considerably more kudos (and power!) than a standard 'shopping' ForTwo.

At 101bhp the Lorinser ForTwo has more horses than any of the factory versions. It may not sound very much but at just 800kg it's power to weight ratio is quite staggering. The 3 cylinder turbo car will race from 0 to 100kmph in under ten second and similar modifications are available for other Smart engines. All models are electronically limited to 160kmph (100mph). That's faster than any of the factory models so the speedo also receives a subtle update.

With that sort of unexpected power it's worth advertising to other road users that this is no ordinary Smart Car. A wide wrap around front spoiler with a deep air scoop does the job from the front. It also helps keep the air flowing over the car not under it and the wheels firmly on the ground. The standard Smart is taller than it is wide which isn't good for stability that's why the new rear end features wide muscular wheel arches - 55mm wider than standard - to create room for giant 8.5x17 alloy rims with 225/35R17 tyres. At the front there are 7x17 inch wheels with 205/40R17 tyres.

The new Lorinser wheels feature six spade-shaped spokes and the wider track improves cornering considerably.
